

April 2019

Greetings from New York!

We hope you and your host family are doing well. It may be hard to believe, but it is only a few months before your AFS program comes to an end. As the summer approaches, we wanted to give an outline of how your departure will go.

Your local volunteers will be in touch with you regarding your local End-of-Stay orientation and your travel to Washington, D.C between June 24 and 25. During the next few months, the volunteers in your area will be contacting you to give you specific details.

Here are the guidelines that you will need as you prepare for the end of the year. Please read the guidelines carefully and understand that the requirements apply to all students. Luggage restrictions have become very strict. Too much luggage can be a problem for you and for others. AFS will not take responsibility for your overweight or oversized luggage. Please make arrangements to ship home any belongings to ensure that your baggage does not exceed luggage limits. AFS luggage tags will be available during your End of Stay orientation.

We hope your last few months go well. As we said, your area volunteers will be contacting you with End of Stay information during the next few months.

Elizabeth Bigelow, Regional Travel & Logistics Coordinator, AFS-USA

June 2019
Washington, D.C. DEPARTURE
BAGGAGE GUIDELINES FOR AFS PARTICIPANTS

Please remember that you are responsible for ALL extra charges for overweight and oversized luggage!

Call your domestic and international airlines NOW to find out the restrictions!

Domestic Travel to your International Gateway City:

You may be traveling domestically by train from your orientation site to your international departure airport, if it is not in Washington, D.C. In the coming months, you will receive more information on this travel from your local volunteers.

Weight and size limits for international flights:

Many airlines now only allow one piece of luggage to be checked in per passenger free of charge and have reduced the weight limit to 50 pounds per bag. Some airlines no longer allow any free bags! Please call your airline to check the restrictions. For some airlines, it is not possible to pay overweight charges. The airline will make you leave anything over the weight restrictions behind. Also, airlines have very strict rules about carry-on luggage. Most airlines are allowing only one piece of carry-on luggage plus a purse or small backpack. The average size limit for each checked piece of luggage is 62 inches (about 152.4 centimeters - add the length + depth + width of your luggage to figure out the size). Your carry-on bag must be less than 45 linear inches. Again, call your airline to make sure you are not bringing home bags that are oversized.

Be aware that if either of your bags is larger or heavier than these figures, you may be charged an "excess baggage" fee - which can be anywhere from $75-$300 per bag (to be paid by cash or by credit card). AFS will not pay these charges for you! The airline may also not allow you to check these bags in at all. You will have to leave behind anything that is overweight. Please make sure you have a credit card you can use in case of excess charges.

Carry-on luggage needs to be able to fit under the airline seat or in an overhead compartment. Items such as golf clubs, bicycles, skis, and snow-boards are generally considered "over-sized" baggage and you will have to pay additional charges. If you have an oversize suitcase you will usually have to pay a charge ($80-$110), depending on the item's size and weight, even if such an item is your second "checked" piece of luggage. It is a good idea to call the airline before-hand to check on any oversized baggage. These regulations are also posted on the websites for each airline.

Musical Instruments, such as guitars are considered part of your luggage allotment on flights. If you plan to return with a musical instrument you will only be allowed one other piece of checked luggage.

Such items will need to be checked as an extra piece of luggage, and you will need to pay additional baggage fees as required by the airline.

Security:

Airlines are now searching all bags when a passenger checks in for their flight. Please take this into consideration when packing. Someone may go into your bag after you have closed and locked it and may not help you re-close your bag! In addition, locks on luggage can pose a problem at security checkpoints in airports. Please make sure to unlock your luggage while it is going through security, and/or keep your luggage key available while checking in.

Please check the website of your international and domestic airline for restrictions on bringing liquids in either your carry-on or checked luggage.

Airline Information by Country:

We have listed the majority of the airlines that students will most likely be travelling on when departing from New York. We recognize this list is not complete, but wanted to provide the information that is currently available.

Argentina: American Airlines
Colombia: Delta
Denmark: KLM
Finland: Iceland Air/Lufthansa
France: American Airlines
Germany: Lufthansa
Italy: Delta Airlines/Air France/KLM
Japan: Japan Airlines
Netherlands: United Airlines
Norway: American Airlines
Paraguay: Copa Airlines
Serbia: KLM
Spain: American Airlines
Switzerland: Swiss Air
Thailand: Emirates

Baggage Tags:

You will receive the yellow AFS baggage tags at your End of Stay. All of your luggage must be clearly labeled! Be sure to put your natural family address on the baggage tags.

